FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Date of transcription 2/15/80

[redacted] Wisconsin Department of Criminal Investigation [redacted] Wisconsin (telephone [redacted] advised that he had conducted an investigation of the fire of the Show Bar, Hurley, Wisconsin, which burned on April 20, 1979. [redacted] investigation had been made more difficult because, at the direction of mayor of Hurley, the walls of the Show Bar were knocked in prior to [redacted] opportunity to conduct arson investigation. This made it very difficult to determine the point of origin or cause of the blaze. In connection with his investigation, [redacted] had interviewed [redacted] Show Bar. He noted that [redacted] advised him that she had been offered $100,000 for the Show Bar by someone from the local bank and that two men from Michigan had wanted to buy the Show Bar also. He noted that [redacted] had been inside the Show Bar at about the time the fire started, and a witness allegedly saw three men coming out of the Show Bar just before the fire. [redacted] stated that the Show Bar was definitely underinsured, indicating the arson for profit motive unlikely.

In connection with his investigation, on January 30, 1980, [redacted] interviewed Iron County Circuit Judge ALEX RAINERI, who advised [redacted] that originally the Show Bar was founded by [redacted] "JACKPOT" GASBARRI, and RICHARD MATTRELLA, as partners. The same two were partners in a club in Newport, Kentucky, which MATTRELLA sold with JACKPOT getting nothing from the sale. RAINERI quoted JACKPOT as [redacted] that if MATTRELLA ever felt he had any money coming from the Show Bar, then MATTRELLA [redacted] from the Kentucky operation. RAINERI felt that MATTRELLA still believed he had an interest in the Show Bar.

[redacted] furnished the attached copies of a portion of his investigative report relating to the Show Bar fire.

6 [redacted] Ironwood, Michigan, Accountant, was interviewed at his office by S/A [redacted] on October 19, 1979. The purpose of this interview was to determine what several items consisted of in [redacted] the tax return of Ritz Bar Corporation which [redacted] had prepared. b6 b7C

[redacted] stated that all of the information used to prepare the tax returns for [redacted] the Ritz Bar Corporation was provided by [redacted] [redacted] and he did not actually see some of the legal documents to substantiate the fact there indeed was a mortgage against this corporation. b6 b7C

[redacted] added as far as he knew the Ritz Bar Corporation owed the Whiteway Motel Corporation $27,400. He added from information provided by [redacted] was paid to the Whiteway Motel Corporation in 1976 but they did not have any money to make interest payments in 1977. b6 b7C

He added the item in the tax return showing a loan from the stockholders to the Ritz Bar Corporation would be from [redacted] to the business itself. [redacted] added during 1976 and 1977 he did all of the bookwork for the Show Bar and did make out a 1978 income tax return and provided it to [redacted] He added [redacted] told him the tax return did not look right to her and she wanted someone else to take a look at it. [redacted] stated that he had retained a copy of this 1978 return. b6 b7C

[redacted] felt that as the Show Bar was being advertised for sale about this time it was his impression that [redacted] wanted the figures changed to show that the business was doing better than what it actually was doing. b6 b7C

He stated further that [redacted] wanted him to attend a number of meetings in Alex Reineri's office which he declined to do and felt towards the end that all of the reports were sent to Reineri. He stated further just a couple of months before the fire about all he did was the payroll for the Show Bar. b6 b7C

[redacted] added it was very difficult to figure out from the information provided by [redacted] the actual income of the bar as there were receipts he was not able to account for. He added it was his impression that [redacted] Alex were keeping some things to themselves that he should have been aware of if he was doing the bookwork. b6 b7C

Most of the waitresses at the Club Carnival dreaded waiting on the RAINERIS and GASBARRIS, because on almost every occasion they got very drunk and were obnoxious. In addition, they were very poor tippers. Most of the time the cost of the meal and drinks was stood by JACKPOT GASBARRI, though occasionally ALEX RAINERI paid. The ratio of payments was approximately three to one, GASBARRI versus RAINERI. All of the waitresses had been told by JACKPOT never to take RAINERI's money, but on occasion RAINERI would offer the money assuming it to be rejected, and the girls would often take it just for spite. The waitresses purposely never hung around the table where GASBARRI and b6 b7C of JACKPOT, who stated as the result, "We got a good reputation." What he meant, [redacted] advised, was that the investigation was free advertising for their business. She stated that lots of people in town do not like ALEX RAINERI, and a number of people "think he's a crook". She suggested that [redacted] MATTRELLA, [redacted] have this opinion. b6 b7C their friends used to eat for free at the Club Carnival and Show Bar. Though this continued at the Show Bar, it was not on as large a scale because the dining area downstairs was separated from the dancing and drinking area on the main floor. Chicago, Ill. — Stable hands noisily cracked open the morning. Squirrely Shirley, Jitterbug and Hutch attacked the stable with shovels and brooms and hoses; they were feedin' and scrubbin', sweepin' and shovelin'.

Their stable, Bell Valley Farms, is in pastureland southwest of here where the grass is cut into rectangles by dark stained fences. This is as close to Kentucky as Chicago's gonna get.

The loudest sound in the stable the other day had a name. It was called Dominic Frinzi.

Frinzi is a short, round man getting rounder; sometimes he talks out of the corner of his mouth and looks like a tough guy coming out of the shadows in a gangster movie from the '30s. He uses both hands to talk, so don't stand too close to him. Slashing and smashing and clapping his hands, Frinzi's a character in search of the right play.

He's a restless, articulate man who talks tough and hammers away at life with both hands. If Frinzi's standing still, you know he's asleep.

"Hey, Connel," he yelled at Connel Willis, a buddy from the race track.

Willis wore a Western hat that had the head of a snake attached to it; there was no sign of the rest of the rattler. Naturally, they call Willis the Snake and one of his brothers is called the Spider.

"That horse I bought with your brother Jesse, remember?" Frinzi said. "There was this horse pulling a milk wagon for the Amish and we bought the horse and trained it and he beat Black Label, the leading trotter in the state. A workhorse hauling milk."

Frinzi, an attorney who has spent his life in Milwaukee, has been spending a lot of time at the harness tracks here in recent years. Harness Horsemen International, a group that represents 19 harness racing associations in the country, has just named him its "man of the year."

In six years, Frinzi has been part owner of 26 harness horses, including six he has now. During a three-year period, his horses finished first 65 times.

Harness racing is big business in Illinois, with enough characters to fill a couple of grandstands, so Frinzi fits in well front and center. He works and laughs hard, sometimes, even at himself.

A few years ago, heavy traffic kept him from getting to the track until just before the first race was to start. He was hurrying toward the betting window when he was stopped four feet away from laying down a few bills on his favorite horse, as he is wont to do. Frinzi slipped in some water and fell, and the windows were closed on the betting. Not only did the horse win without his bet, he said, but of less importance, his ankle was broken.

Talking to Snake, Frinzi said, "I had a horse blind in one eye. My first horse, Shanty's Pride. First two months at the track, they ask me, 'When you going to get rid of it?' It'd start in the lead, lead all the way to the stretch, and then die. Paid $15,000 and couldn't sell him for $6,000.

"We decided not to run the horse for a while, it put on 200 pounds, and the horse won 11 of 13 starts. Made a lot of money on that horse.

"I used to go to the opera in Minneapolis for a week. One day they were putting on an opera, a German opera I didn't like, and I flew down to Chicago to watch Shanty's Pride win and then I flew back to Minneapolis for opera for the rest of the week."

Frinzi, 59, said he likes action in opera, as well as life. He once flew to Rome to see Verdi's, "Nabucco," which he described as a "tough opera that isn't performed here often." For years, he has chased arias all over this country.

While waiting with a newspaper reporter for a jury verdict in a trial in Milwaukee, Frinzi once sang the opening aria from "Aida" in a hallway in the Courthouse.

Frinzi has lived a life in which he has shifted gears. He studied for the priesthood for 10 years, dropped out and became one of the best-known criminal defense attorneys in Milwaukee in the late '50s and early '60s. In 1963, the FBI bugged his law office for six months because of his alleged association with some Milwaukee underworld figures, government officials said. He also ran for governor twice.

Since he got into harness racing in Illinois in 1974, he has served two terms as president of the Illinois Harness Horsemen's Association. One of his horses, Mr. Big B, won more than $70,000 in 1½ years.

When Snake had to leave the stable, Frinzi said goodby loudly, of course, in a room where horses have their own swimming pool. The pool is 14 feet deep and is used for horses with various ailments, including bad legs.

The stable hands'll tell you that the water soothes aches and pains so some horses don't have to be sent to the killers, as they call the people who turn horses that can't race any more into horsemeat.

Before Frinzi left, he introduced his latest acquisition, Dumpy Dancer, took Lone Star Hanover for a ride around the track at the farms, told rapid-fire stories about racing and opera and court, and scared a couple of big dogs with his voice. For Frinzi, a full day in an hour-and-a-half.

[redacted] stated that she was aware that the Federal Bureau of Investigation in 1950, 1960, and 1970 had been in Hurley, Wisconsin, asking questions about Alex J. Raineri, as Alex Raineri had been the City Attorney of Hurley, Wisconsin, as well as Prosecuting Attorney, and now a Circuit Judge.

[redacted] stated that she had no direct knowledge of any payoffs to anyone in a position of authority, but it would be naive to think that in a community that had 85 bars and a population of less than 3,000 people not to have various individuals on the take. [redacted] stated that she was not sure she would tell the interviewing Agents if she had any knowledge which would assist them in this investigation.

FD-302 (REV. 3-8-77)

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Date of transcription 3/19/80

[redacted] was advised of the identity of the interviewing Agent and the purpose of this interview. b6 b7C

[redacted] voluntarily furnished the following information in the presence of his wife, [redacted]

[redacted] stated that in the early 1950s, he moved to Hurley, Wisconsin, and became [redacted] of the Bond Box Tavern. [redacted] stated that from the very beginning, the [redacted] were not part of the in-crowd in Hurley, Wisconsin, as the in-crowd was made up of Italians.

[redacted] stated that Hurley, Wisconsin, is a notorious wide open town that has a population of between 2,500 and 3,000 individuals and 85 bars. [redacted] stated that during the past 25 years, he had been interviewed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Hurley, Wisconsin, concerning the activities of Sam Giovanoni, a former Mayor of Hurley, Wisconsin, Alex Raineri, and Jack Gasbarri. b6 b7C

[redacted] stated that there were only three taverns in Hurley, Wisconsin, that had exotic female dancers and these taverns were the Show Bar and Club Carnival owned by Gasbarri and the Bond Box, [redacted] stated that he had no direct knowledge of payoffs paid by any individuals to anyone, but if payoffs were paid by the Italian community in Hurley, Wisconsin, these payoffs would have undoubtedly been picked up by Gasbarri, as he was "king of the street". [redacted] stated that he had never been [redacted] female dancers to engage in soliciting or acts of prosecution on the premise of the Bond Box. [redacted] stated that it would be impossible for [redacted] the activities of the exotic dancers at the Bond Box when they were

[redacted] stated he had no proof that anyone in Hurley, Wisconsin, paid either the Mayor, City Attorneys, local law enforcement agencies, or others to allow them to engage in illegal activities. [redacted] stated that it was common knowledge that the Club Carnival and the Show Bar stayed open until the early morning hours and were not closed by law enforcement agencies in Hurley, Wisconsin. [redacted] stated that he had been [redacted] for having the Bond Box Tavern open after hours, and he felt that these [redacted] were only because [redacted] would not pay to the proper authorities to allow him to operate after hours. [redacted] stated that no one had ever approached him asking for any payments, and due to the fact that [redacted] was not Italian, he felt that he was not trusted by the majority of the ruling faction in Hurley, Wisconsin. b6 b7C

[redacted] stated that on numerous occasions, he had seen Alex J. Raineri and Jackpot Gasbarri, and Gasbarri's [redacted] having drinks together, and it was well known in Hurley, Wisconsin, that Alex Raineri and Jackpot Gasbarri and Sam Giovanoni were close friends. b6 b7C

[redacted] advised that he could not recall the names of any of the exotic female dancers that the Bond Box Tavern in Hurley, Wisconsin, employed, as [redacted] Hurley, Wisconsin, approximately [redacted] and were now residing [redacted]

[redacted] stated that he had been in [redacted] in Hurley, Wisconsin, for [redacted] and did not spread rumours, and generally kept to himself and had no direct proof that any individuals in Hurley, Wisconsin, had been engaged in any illegal activities.

The above is being furnished for background of each receiving office as it is requested that outstanding leads be covered and reported to meet FGJ dates. FBI Laboratory is being similarly notified as undoubtedly expeditious document examinations will be requested.

As the result of the above discussion with USA, additional characters of ITAR - Prostitution and ITAR - Bribery have been added to the character of this matter. These relate to RAINERI's alleged [redacted] Show Bar account and alleged interstate travel to Iron River, Michigan, to arrange for and transport dancers to Hurley, Wisconsin; and RAINERI's "trade-off" of a traffic ticket in his court, the subject of which was a Michigan police officer, in exchange for dismissal of a ticket personally incurred by RAINERI in a Gogebic County, Michigan, auto accident on 12/24/78. This was reportedly set up by RAINERI in an interstate telephone call to Gogebic County District Attorney, and appears to fit the Wisconsin bribery statute, a felony. b6 b7C

Result of examination:

Significant handwriting characteristics in common were observed when the known handwriting of ALEX J. RAINERI, the writer of specimen K1, was compared with the questioned entries appearing on specimens Q6, Q7 and Q9, which indicate RAINERI prepared these entries.

Although a definite determination could not be made whether RAINERI did or did not prepare the questioned entries appearing on specimens Q1, Q2, Q3, Q4, Q5 and Qc8, because of variations in the writings available for comparison purposes, handwriting characteristics were observed which would not permit the elimination of RAINERI as the possible writer of the questioned entries appearing in the payee portions of specimens Q1, Q2 and Q3, and the signature appearing on specimen Qc8.

The submitted evidence was photographed. Specimen K1 and the ALSO SUBMITTED paper signed [redacted] are returned herewith. Specimens Q1 through Q9 and the ALSO SUBMITTED W-2 form will be returned with the results of the requested latent fingerprint examination. b6 b7C

He was formerly a bartender at the Show Bar in Hurley, Wisconsin, for approximately [redacted] in the latter part [redacted] through [redacted]

[redacted] was asked if he had any knowledge regarding the operation of the Show Bar, in particular prostitution activities that had occurred there. the motel next door. She knew that these girls were prostitutes having been told about it by [redacted] who learned it from the girls. [redacted] said it to ALEX RAINERI "you know those girls are turning tricks". RAINERI replied "do not worry about it", and "let them, that is none of your business". There were once seven girls at once working out of the Show Bar, five of them having obtained an apartment in back of a motel on US 2, Ironwood, Michigan. On several occasions [redacted] ALEX brought back girls from Iron River to work in the Show Bar. They once brought four girls at once, [redacted] had too many girls [redacted] She believed on one occasion they also brought some other girls that did not work in the Show Bar. Some dancers arrived in Hurley unannounced, saying that [redacted] told them to come. [redacted] often did not know before hand who would be the dancers. On one occasion ALEX RAINERI gave the girls some instructions, which created problems between the girls [redacted] the Show Bar and trying to direct them.

RAINERI helped [redacted] the payroll of the Show Bar, and knew that money was being paid to the dancers without listing their social security numbers. RAINERI stated that this did not matter, because they "free lance". She believes that RAINERI closed the Show Bar's bank account at the First National Bank of Ironwood, Michigan. She noted that RAINERI is friends with [redacted] She believed that somewhere there existed a payroll book for the Show Bar.

Some of the prostitutes that danced at both the Show Bar and the Jack-o-Lantern in Iron River were [redacted] Two or three other girls who looked very much alike used the same name and no social security number. [redacted] (lnu) and a prostitute

[redacted] from Milwaukee who was involved in a Federal Grand Jury investigation in 1972 and knows ALEX RAINERI well, stayed at the Holiday Inn, Hurley, and at one time had a lot of money in their room. This [redacted] (lnu) is not identical [redacted] who had been in Hurley, Wisconsin for years, [redacted] the Show Bar and being involved in prostitution [redacted] did not get along well with [redacted] is believed to know ALEX RAINERI and RAINERI's association with the Show Bar. b6 b7C

[redacted] recalled that sometime in a prior investigation of prostitution in Hurley, Deputy Sheriffs MORZENTI [redacted] were involved in some sort of trouble with the Club 13, at which time RAINERI got them out of this trouble. In the days when [redacted] JACK GASBARRI, aka JACKPOT, was alive, she knew that JACK collected money for ALEX RAINERI from bar owners in the first block of Silver Street. At that time RAINERI was District Attorney and prostitution flourished in Hurley. Individuals she knew were paying off RAINERI through JACKPOT were [redacted] now [redacted] Bars such as the French Casino, Club 13, and Club Carnival all featured prostitution. Many times [redacted] JACKPOT give the money to ALEX RAINERI, either in the office of the Show Bar or in [redacted] RAINERI would advise JACKPOT when the FBI or State men were in town investigating prostitution. She advised that [redacted] which included names of people who [redacted] to do business with ALEX RAINERI (after JACKPOT's death). She cannot locate [redacted] but believes that it may be in [redacted] her car. In the days when JACKPOT was still alive, ALEX RAINERI went along on a number of trips to Las Vegas and other locations with [redacted] JACKPOT [redacted] these trips always being paid for by either JACKPOT [redacted] RAINERI always was the one who demanded how much he would get from each bar owner. On several occasions [redacted] RAINERI and JACKPOT arguing over the amount of money RAINERI demanded, JACKPOT stating that business was not as good as it used to be when they had lumberjacks in town. JACKPOT and ALEX would sit in [redacted] and talk for hours. Every Saturday and Sunday the RAINERIs and GASBARRIs were together, and it was on Sundays that RAINERI made his collections. On the same night as the Club Carnival, which JACKPOT owned, burned down, involving a severe financial loss to them, she saw ALEX RAINERI sitting in [redacted] being given pay offs by JACKPOT for other bar owners. While JACK was still alive he [redacted] that ALEX had b6 b7C

everything [redacted] She trusted RAINERI, but was warned several times by [redacted] (phonetic), Vice President of [redacted] did not trust RAINERI. b6 b7C

[redacted] stated that after JACKPOT's death, RAINERI asked [redacted] other bar owners that they should continue to pay or go out of business, RAINERI's favorite term being "board them up". It was RAINERI who suggested [redacted] the Show Bar, stating [redacted] will make money".

She believed that while JACKPOT was alive he was paying the current Sheriff, ART CARLI, as CARLI was regularly seen in the Show Bar. She noted that the Show Bar never closed, ignoring closing hours. The Show Bar made money for both the years 1977 and 1978.

RAINERI would come to [redacted] every night after 5 p.m. and often stayed until 9 p.m. [redacted] to Milwaukee with RAINERI on his business, and [redacted] at the Ramada Inn downtown. In Milwaukee, RAINERI bought liquor in two different places, which [redacted] brought back for the Show Bar, RAINERI paying in cash with money from the Club. The liquor was purchased in case sizes and he did not [redacted] stores where he made the purchases, though on one occasion pointed one out [redacted] was a place downtown with lots of antique liquor bottles, having good prices on liquor and RAINERI having a friend there. [redacted] went to Milwaukee [redacted] in the summer of 1976, and returned a number of times thereafter. RAINERI continued to make liquor purchases for the Show Bar after he became Judge. She noted that RAINERI also went to Milwaukee on occasions without her, and had a number of friends there. b6 b7C

She knows Judge CHRIST SERAPHIM of Milwaukee, who is a friend of RAINERI, and [redacted] SERAPHIM in court in Milwaukee, and [redacted] SERAPHIM in Milwaukee. [redacted] ALEX RAINERI asked CHRIST SERAPHIM "where can I find a couple of girls to work in the Club?" SERAPHIM replied "none come to mind right now, I'll let you know next trip". SERAPHIM knew that RAINERI was looking for girls for the Club on his trips to Milwaukee. [redacted] stated that "SERAPHIM knew Hurley and what was going on". In the summer of 1977, she and RAINERI went to SERAPHIM's apartment in Milwaukee, [redacted] with SERAPHIM and his girlfriend. This occurred another time [redacted] She described SERAPHIM's girlfriend as being a young girl b6 b7C in [redacted] tall, slim, black hair, nice looking, who spoke with a [redacted] She felt that SERAPHIM liked this young lady, as she was his steady girlfriend and he talked very nicely about her. b6 b7C

[redacted] described the SERAPHIM apartment as being reached by taking an elevator, possibly to [redacted] and then proceeding down a hall to [redacted] SERAPHIM's apartment is small, containing a combination living room/dining room, a bedroom off to the left, and a bathroom. She recalled that the floor was carpeted and that the living room contained a portable bar. There was no windows in the bedroom, which contained a full bed, a chest of drawers, and a chair by the bed. On one of their visits SERAPHIM was sick and lying in bed, watching a nice portable television set which was in the bedroom.

In one conversation SERAPHIM bragged about getting a newspaper man fired in Milwaukee. SERAPHIM seemed worried about an investigation of his judicial ethics. RAINERI once said "SERAPHIM knows every black prostitute in Milwaukee". She knew that all of the girls dancing in the Show Bar know SERAPHIM, [redacted] in particular having mentioned him. She believed that SERAPHIM also knew [redacted] from Iron River. b6 b7C

She advised that RAINERI, [redacted] signed the names of others on Show Bar Corporate documents. Some of these others whose names were signed were ALBERT STELLA, WHITNEY OSBORN (OZZIE), [redacted] She recalled that RAINERI also told her that [redacted] for the Holiday Inn in Hurley. She believed that RAINERI was elected Judge on the strength of his association with a city councilman in Mercer, Wisconsin, a big fat guy, as RAINERI told her he intended to pay the guy and later paid him $5,000.00. She believed that this payment was to influence the votes in Mercer, and stated that RAINERI's victory was as result of a large majority vote in Mercer. She knows that [redacted] JACKPOT, had made out a will, though no will ever appeared after JACKPOT's death. JACKPOT made out the will in RAINERI's office [redacted] after a visit to Doctor [redacted] office across the street.

Among RAINERI's friends was an attorney from Milwaukee, a [redacted] at Chicago Downs Race Track. [redacted] RAINERI once went with [redacted] to Chicago to watch the "buggies" [redacted] RAINERI made large bets, winning money [redacted] in the last two races. She believed that the amount won was $3,700.00 and RAINERI asked [redacted] She knows that RAINERI also talked to [redacted] about girls for the Show Bar, but the result was unknown. [redacted] RAINERI say to [redacted] "by any chance do you know any place we can get some girls to take back to Hurley?" b6 b7C

[redacted] a Judges' convention in Wisconsin, possibly Fond du Lac, with RAINERI. At the place where the convention was being held there were strippers, and they went to see the strippers to see if they could find some for the Show Bar. One girl gave them a telephone number which ALEX RAINERI called and found to be the Sauna Inn, Minneapolis. After talking to them, the Show Bar obtained girls from the Sauna Inn four or five times, each time sending a check for commission to the Sauna Inn. The Sauna Inn received 15% of the salary paid to the girls. Their salary was taken out of payroll, She heard RAINERI's conversation inquiring about the girls, and heard him say something about "who would like to make money on the side". He said this would be no trouble. The girls who came from the Sauna Inn were young, wild, white girls, who either drove or flew over from Minneapolis. On the trip that [redacted] to Reno with RAINERI, [redacted] drove to Minneapolis and then flew to Reno, [redacted] to Reno and back via Minneapolis. On the way back in Minneapolis RAINERI called the Sauna Inn to see if any girls were available to ride back with them, but none were available. b6 b7C

[redacted] RAINERI came in about June, 1979, after the fire that destroyed the Show Bar. At that time [redacted] saw RAINERI about [redacted] and has had no conversation with him since that time. b6 b7C

[redacted] voluntarily furnished her fingerprints and posed for a photograph, after which she furnished handwriting samples.

[redacted] advised that he could not tell from his records or recall how the Sauna Inn Booking Agency and the Show Bar originally came into contact, though he believed that it was probably at the initiation of the Show Bar, as such bars often called booking agencies seeking dancers. He did recall having several conversations with [redacted] whom he believed to be [redacted] the Show Bar, and stated that [redacted] in their dealings. [redacted] noted that the Sauna Inn Booking Agency booked heavily into South Dakota, Iowa and North Dakota and did some booking in Minnesota, but did not do much booking in Wisconsin. could recall no personal contact with the owners and/or operators of the Show Bar. He noted that such dancer bookings are generally arranged over the telephone. He considered the Show Bar to be a satisfactory account. He noted that he probably did not personally talk to a club representative each time they called, often this work being done by [redacted] the company to go [redacted] He noted that [redacted] by Colonial Properties, 4532 France Avenue South, Edina, Minnesota (612-920-6202), but he had no knowledge of the current whereabouts [redacted] at Sauna Inn Booking Agency. b6 b7C

Generally the arrangements between the booking agency and club were a payment of a 15% fee to the agency for initial bookings of a dancer; if she stayed with the agency for 50 jobs, the booking fee would be 10%; and if she remained for 100 jobs, the booking fee would drop to 5%. Thus, the fee depended upon the girl sent and the salary paid by the club.

From notations on the Ritz Bar, Inc. card, [redacted] determined that the job paid $300 per week and the dancer was furnished with an apartment. Working hours were straight through from 7:00 p. m. - 1:00 a. m. during the winter, and 8:00 p. m. - 2:00 a. m. during the summer, Monday through Saturday, with four shows nightly. Dancers performed in G-string, topless. A notation on the card reflects "stayed at Chalet". [redacted] advised he did not know the meaning of this statement. Also reflected on the card was that from Minneapolis, Hurley, Wisconsin, was a six hour drive, 225 miles. It was further reflected that there was an airplane schedule to Ironwood, Michigan, this schedule and the bus schedule being set forth on the card. This was information that would be given to girls booked into the Show Bar. Also observed on the card was the quotation "strict rules", and "check - must stay in room". [redacted] stated that he did not know the meaning of the notations. b6 b7C

On the reverse side of the card was listed the names and dates of dancers booked by Sauna Inn Booking Agency booked into the Show Bar. [redacted] noted that a lot of the writing on the cards was that of his office secretaries. b6 b7C

[redacted] recalled talking [redacted] and recalled a discussion of the bar business, which [redacted] were at that time involved in. [redacted] apparently knew of this, because [redacted] on the telephone that [redacted] place was for sale. [redacted] had never been to the Show Bar and was not interested in its purchase, so this line of conversation did not go any further. The Sauna Inn Booking Agency operated until about Thanksgiving, 1978, when they went out of business. They would not have operated this long except that the agency functioned as a booking service for an agency owned bar which was sold at about that time. After the Sauna Inn Booking Agency ceased operation, a lot of Sauna Inn dancers went to a booking agency named Bar Enterprises, which was becoming a strong booking agency in Minneapolis at about that time. This was [redacted] Lariat Bar in Fargo, North Dakota. He could not recall the owners' names.

[redacted] stated that he could not recall having dealt with anyone relating to Show Bar business other than the above-described [redacted] He stated that he could not recall any contacts with [redacted] and he was sure that he has never heard of the name of Alex Raineri. b6 b7C

[redacted] advised that he always took applications from each individual dancer booked by the Sauna Inn Booking Agency. Ho noted that these individuals move a lot, and addresses on these forms may not be current. He exhibited an application of [redacted] Chicago, Illinois, a Negro female born [redacted] [redacted] pounds, brown eyes, brown hair, Social Security account number [redacted] noting that this application dated June 6, 1977, reflected that [redacted] at the Show Bar, Hurley, for six months, and the Jack-O-Lantern, Iron River, Michigan, for 18 months. He stated that by reviewing these former employments, the Sauna Inn Booking Agency was able to expand its mailing list and attract new customers. He noted that he recently threw away many applications of Negro females who had sought to dance through the Sauna Inn Booking Agency, because the Sauna Inn had quite a number good black dancers whom they kept regularly employed, but there was not enough demand for additional ones.

[redacted] reviewed the Ritz Bar, Inc. card relating to dancers booked into the Show Bar and stated that there was nothing written on the card to indicate whether or not the bar was involved in prostitution. He stated that generally speaking if a bar accepted anybody as a dancer, particularly black dancers, they accepted prostitutes and did not care. If a bar asked specifically for black dancers, they were probably looking for prostitutes. In particular, after reviewing the list of dancers furnished to the Show Bar, he stated that this indicates there were more black dancers than white dancers, the list containing only three known white females. [redacted] reviewed the list of dancers dated as follows: b6 b7C b6 b7C

[redacted]

He advised as follows regarding these individuals:

[redacted] is a white female, known to him to be a prostitute with a black pimp, this pimp hanging around the Sioux City, Iowa, bar formerly owned by Sauna Inn. [redacted] [redacted] is a part-time prostitute. [redacted] and

[redacted] were unrecalled. [redacted] was a Negro female whom he doubted was involved in prostitution. [redacted] was believed involved in prostitution. [redacted] (last name unknown) and [redacted] were unknown. [redacted] all were individuals whom he believed occasionally to be involved in prostitution. [redacted] commented, "Not too many go-go girls don't turn a trick from time to time." He noted that in bars featuring go-go girls, as opposed to exotic dancers, or show girls, "Almost every customer is rapping on the dancer", stating this to be an accepted fact. b6 b7C

[redacted] noted that the above-listed girls were also dancers who danced for relatively cheap salaries, this being a possible indication that they were making money on the side. As a booking agent he did not care if the dancers were hookers, though some bar owners would specify "no hookers". He stated that only about 10 - 15% of his dancers really were not prostitutes.

[redacted] noted that being a dancer's booking agency is really a poor business. [redacted] overhead of a watts line at $500 to $700 per month, office help, etc., made it difficult to make a profit if booking was the company's only business. To make a profit the booking agency must have bars featuring dancers on the side, the profits primarily being made from the bars or clubs. b6 b7C

The booking agency received payments from the clubs, in the case of the Show Bar this being in form of checks representing the booking agency fee which would be deposited into the bank account of the Sauna Inn Booking Agency. The clubs would pay the booking agency only the 15%, and the dancer then collected her salary from the club where she danced. These bars usually paid the dancers at the end of the week for which she danced. When a girl traveled to a dancing engagement by plane, either the dancer paid the plane fare or the booking agency advanced her the travel funds, these being repaid from the bar. This was ultimately discontinued when it became unprofitable.

[redacted] advised that he has never dealt with the Jack-O-Lantern Bar, Iron River, Michigan, the Boom Bay Bar, Rhinelander, Wisconsin, nor any location he could recall in Fond du Lac, Wisconsin. He has heard of Robin Hood Enterprises, believed operated by an old black woman, with whom he has not had much contact. He believed this booking agency has not been in business for three or four years. b6 b7C

He is familiar with the Saratoga Bar, a strip joint in Duluth, Minnesota, across the street from a Sauna Inn which his corporation owned. He is not familiar with the operator of the Saratoga and has never supplied it with any dancers.

[redacted] suggested that a dancer who was very knowledgeable about the "northern circuit", comprised of upper Michigan and northern Wisconsin, was an [redacted] a Negro female dancer last known to be residing at [redacted] Iowa. He believed that [redacted] is now working as loan officer at the First National Bank of Sioux City. She is either living with or married to a man named [redacted] Her last known telephone number was [redacted] had danced in a number of these bars on the northern circuit. She came to Sauna Inn from dancing at Annette's Place, Escanaba, Michigan, operated by an individual known as [redacted] who is also very knowledgeable of this type of business in this area. b6 b7C

[redacted] stated that there is no indication in his files relating to any type of call from [redacted] anyone associated with the Show Bar in about October, 1978. He stated that such a call could have been received but was unknown to him. [redacted] furnished the original of the Ritz Bar, Inc. card, Sauna Inn application for employment of [redacted] also known as [redacted] also known as [redacted] He further furnished work

history cards regarding the above individuals plus [redacted] b6

There had been no prostitution in the Club Carnival, which was a restaurant featuring shows. Later in about 1968-1969, [redacted] French Casino, which had prostitution. The Band Box, which was open when she came to town, also had prostitution. There was no prostitution at the Show Bar in the early 1960's, as it was just like the Club Carnival. Prostitution first began at the Show Bar as part of the Show Bar's business when [redacted] had told [redacted] after [redacted] but when [redacted] come in with the girls [redacted] along, [redacted] Before this time, the dancers at the Show Bar had been engaging in prostitution for many years, this being known to the house, but the house getting no cut. Dancing at the Show Bar was just a method of meeting prostitution customers for most girls. b6 b7C

The more recent dancers at the Show Bar were "wilder", and less interested in dancing than in the earlier years, but were more interested in prostitution and in making their contacts in the Show Bar between dancing appearances. Some of these prostitutes who danced as a method of advertising or meeting prostitution clients, were [redacted] and many of the girls who also danced at the Jack-o-Lantern in Iron River. Some of the girls stayed upstairs in rooms above the Show Bar, though most stayed at area motels since [redacted] rooms upstairs. Specific girls were not recalled. Also, a number of girls came on their own to the Show Bar to dance.

The Show Bar's business included girls dancing on a stage behind the bar. The girls then mingled with customers and "hustled drinks". He has heard that the girls received a percentage of the drink. The drink prices in the Show Bar were very high compared to other places in the area, charging 75¢ per beer, and charging very high prices for very weak mixed drinks, which [redacted] as containing a "thimblefull" of liquor. He believed that [redacted] Jack Gasbarri, the club's owner. He stated that the average customer of the Show Bar went there for the girls, as "you don't go down to the club to drink". [redacted] stated that he is familiar with Alex Raineri, who used to be the attorney for Jackpot Gasbarri. He recalled having seen Alex Raineri in the Show Bar on occasion, though not too often after Jack Gasbarri died. He more often saw Raineri at the Club Carnival, another operation of Jackpot Gasbarri, before that club burned. [redacted] noted that the Club Carnival was a much bigger business than the Show Bar, using a great deal more liquor. The Show Bar did not do near the business of the Club Carnival. He believed that Oneida Liquor has all receipts for all purchases made by both establishments. He noted that Hurley does more liquor business in the winter than in the summer months, due to the winter sports that dominate the area. He could not recall ever having had any dealings with Alex Raineri regarding the Show Bar or Club Carnival businesses.

[redacted] stated that the Schenley line of liquors, the primary line purchased by the Show Bar from Oneida Liquors, is produced in Lawrenceburg, Indiana, and also contains bourbons which come from Kentucky. The main office of Schenley is in New York, New York. He noted that there is no liquor made in Wisconsin, though the State of Wisconsin produces a lot of beer. b6 b7C

[redacted] Felix Patritto, had been employed by the Hurley School System and as a policeman. He had once been in the tavern business for about one year but felt it was "not worth the headache". She furnished the following information relating to the operations of the Hurley City Council in connection with liquor licenses:

To obtain a liquor license, an application is submitted to the City Council. This application is checked over by the Chief of Police, who must give his approval that the prospective licensees are "okay". It is then reviewed by the City Council's Application Committee of which she is not a member. This committee consisted of three members, two of whom have died recently. For years it consisted of [redacted] Leo Negrini, and John Bieno. Negrini and Bieno have recently died, and their replacements were believed to [redacted] In the usual situation, if the license is approved by the Chief of Police and by the Application Committee, it is then voted on by the entire City Council. b6 b7C

The Chief of Police apparently gives his approval on the names on the liquor license such as the registered agent if a corporation. He does not necessarily investigate as to who actually operates the business, and she noted that the corporate agent does not necessarily have to have control of the business for which he or she is agent. She noted that the Show Bar always had an agent; she never remembered the owners actually holding the license. She often wondered, though never brought up the question, [redacted] was not listed on the Show Bar's liquor license.

She assumed that a possible reason might be because [redacted] She stated that she has never heard of [redacted] and their names have never come up in the City Council in connection with the Show Bar's liquor license applications. She stated she had no knowledge of any connection of these individuals with the Show Bar. She noted that the city held Albert Stella responsible for activities of the Show Bar as Stella was the registered agent of the corporation. When asked why the alleged corporate officers such as [redacted] were never mentioned in the City Council, [redacted] a copy of application for liquor license of Ritz Bar, Inc. (Show Bar) and stated that "that is an interesting question". b6 b7C

She stated that she knew that [redacted] was [redacted] of the Holiday Inn, Hurley. She stated that she has no knowledge of what [redacted] with the Holiday Inn, knowing that [redacted] there. She recalled that when the license was initially given to the corporation, [redacted] b6 b7C

[redacted] advised that once in awhile applications for liquor licenses in Hurley are turned down. Those which she could recall during [redacted] City Council being turned down were applications of [redacted] These were both turned down in committee, [redacted] did later obtain a license by making an individual [redacted] his agent. There then was trouble [redacted] and the license was taken away. She figured that it was okay to [redacted] a liquor license, thinking that [redacted] in the liquor business [redacted] The City Council turned down the license in his name because of his criminal record. She had no knowledge whether or not

Alex Raineri had any influence in the turning down of [redacted] liquor license application. Raineri had been District Attorney and City Attorney before becoming Circuit Judge, a position he now holds. Paul Sturgul is now District Attorney and Hurley City Attorney. She noted that at the time [redacted] submitted applications, Raineri would have been in a position to examine the liquor license applications. She does not recall Raineri ever talking during City Council meetings to influence votes or making comments relating to license applicants. She knew Alex Raineri in addition to his positions as District Attorney and City Attorney as the attorney for Jackpot Gasbarri and was also a very close friend to Jackpot. She believed that Jackpot trusted Raineri completely. She knew that Jackpot was involved in prostitution in the "old days", but not later. She had no idea the extent of Raineri's knowledge of Jackpot's business or activity.
